A public school and a parish school adjourn each other at Carondelet. The boys of the two institutions have fierce battles with snowballs. Principal Murphy of the public school was one day knocked down by one of the missiles, and on examining it he found it was made of iron slag, with only a coating of snow. He called Policeman Farley, who caught two of the parish school pupils in the act of waylaying an enemy. The Rev. Father O'Reilly saw the arrest from a window of the parish school, and went out to rescue the prisoners. A fight ensued between the clergyman and the officer, during which they damaged each other a great deal, and the boys escaped. All that night several policemen surrounded Father O'Reilly's house, trying to get in and arrest him, and he sat at an open window exasperating them with jeers and taunts. Such is the story as told by the St. Louis papers. We gather from it that Father O'Reilly has plenty of clean "grit," however he applies it.

The Chinese Missionary Sunday School of St. Louis meets every Sunday at 3 P. M. in the reception parlors of the Y. M. C. A. This school differs from all others, inasmuch as each scholar requires a separate teacher, and there need be as many tutors as pupils, the teachers all being lady instructors. We present the list of names of the teachers and scholars—a marked juxtaposition of colonial and "Mellican" designations:

1. Miss Ada Marvin—Ah Sam.
 2. Rosa Foster—Joe Ping.
 3. Alice E. Waite—Ah Lee.
 4. Marcella Marvin—Ah Cloy.
 5. Birdie Allen—Warrn Goon.
 6. Cornelia Marvin—Ah Why.
 7. Emma Cornwall—Ah Si.
 8. Julia Crawford—Wong Sin John.
 9. Daisy C. Sharp—Mou Lin.
 10. Kate Warren—Joe Hong.
 11. Cora M. Fowler—Wong Tie.
 12. Hattie Grupe—Jew Shong.
 13. Allie B. Hunter—Pang Sung.
 14. Lizzie Sampson—Pang Wee.
 15. Jennie Sampson—Pang Hin.
 16. Annie McClellan—Ju Hin.
 17. Letitia Stewart—Joe Cann.
 18. Minnie L. Russell—Chu Ping.
 19. Mollie Blakely—Ah Yong.
 20. Lizzie Worth—Pang Ying.
 21. Emma Goetz—Ah Goon.

Ed. Register:

Some of our seniors here are talking about this being the coldest winter they have known in this country since the deep snow in 1830; but I think '55 and perhaps one or two since, were quite as severe. The ground froze and snow fell in November, and it is here yet; but it has been pleasant getting around, there being no mud; and for my own part I wish all our winters were like this one.

My time for writing has been taken up lately by trying, at the request of some citizens, to write up the early history of our county, and in looking up matters I find a good deal about the weather: cold winters, wet and dry summers, etc., but nothing indicates that the ground was as thoroughly dried out as it is now. Wells are still low, even some of our mills on the streams have to haul water to make steam.

In 1814 Capt. Wm. Whitesides rallied fifty rangers and jumped half a dozen red-skins, who were supposed to have killed some women and children where Alton now stands, and chased them north through Diamond Grove. In the prairie just north of where Jacksonville now stands in Morgan county, the Indians ran into a swamp and it was so large, dense, and boggy that part of the men had to dismount and follow them on foot; yet that ground to-day is all field and garden, with many fine houses and buildings upon it, the water being supplied from wells, and deep ones at that; so that, to look at it to-day, it would be hard for anyone to believe that it ever was a swamp in which an Indian would take refuge. Yet all over this country I can myself point to changes as great, though my memory goes back hardly forty years. One can hardly help wondering what the country will come to if it changes as much in the next half century, as it has in the last.

What we regard as our very best soil now was then so wet that it was considered hardly fit for improvement; and even within my own recollection, you could dip water out of any prairie well almost the summer through, and get half a dozen "wiggles" in every cupful at that. Now they are digging new wells all winter, and badly off for water in spite of all that can be done on many farms. After the frost comes out we shall have to have some soaking rains or run a great chance of having a season drier than last, unprecedented as that was. The only really good crop we had was wheat on account of drouth, and the new sown wheat made a poor start before the hard winter set in because it was so dry. Where it is uncovered it looks dead; but the snow has doubtless saved most of it so far.

Jacksonville, in Morgan county, in trying to put on metropolitan airs had got over head and ears in debt, and the biggest item was their Holly water works; but they failed so that the city had to buy out a coal shaft, that had been abandoned because it could not be kept clear of water, and put a new pump engine to work. If this is old Jude's doing it's to be hoped he'll keep out of the neighborhood of this mundane sphere hereafter.

Politics are at ebb tide here; and everything else is so quiet that if the wells were not so low I should have to moralize, or give you an essay on social science, or give you nothing.

Our member in the State legislature is trying to get interest down to 6 per cent; and some folks say that will drive money out of this State. It would be a good thing either to have money destroyed, or else shorn of some its tyrannical power.

Ed. Register—

It never rains without it pouring; so here it comes. I took a flying trip to Annapolis to-day. The meeting is over and preacher sick, after three weeks of hard labor—and George Carr and Henry Kesterson were the only converts. Bro. Sankey was also there. Mr. Jos. C. Clarkson was at home; he is away two-thirds of his time looking after his mills. He can come nearer turning a plank into money than any man I know of. Mr. Clarkson is, no doubt, the best business man in the county.

J. M. Morris goes to the city to-night; he is selling goods so fast that it keeps him always buying.

Our new merchants, Woolley & Walden, are receiving their goods already. They are, no doubt, hard-awake merchants, and will do a first-class business here.

Our public school is thriving under the management of J. W. Ragland, who is a first-class teacher, and gives perfect satisfaction.

We have a Literary Society here, which is very interesting.

This is very slippery weather now, and some of the men that were around the saunas yesterday changed ends and were walking on their heads.

Messrs. Charles Williams and Tom Smith, had a misunderstanding yesterday, which was settled by a knock-down.

Mr. William Butts, of Ironton, is visiting his parents here.

Col. Lowe did not come in Saturday to get his coffee. What is the matter, Colonel?

Our blacksmith is kept busy just now putting on ice-shoes.

This is fine weather for saw-mill men getting in logs, &c.
